WHITE DITTANY or FRAXINELLA.

NAMES.

A. بقلة الغزال

G. Δικταμνον.

L. Dictamnus albus.

I. Falso Dittamo.

G. Aeschwurts.

F. DictameBlanch.

S. Ditamo.

D. Fraxinella.

PLACE.

'Tis a Native in Germany & France, and now Naturaliz'd.

DESCRIPTION.

The Roots are large, white, and Spreading. It has many long being like those of the Ash, the plant is call'd Fraxinella. from amongst arises a firm, angular Stalk, of a light green near the Root, but a the Top; 'tis set with white hairs. The Leaves 5, grow smaller a higher on the Stalks, of a bright Green, and on the backs light

The Empalement consists of five Small leaves, set with sho Hairs. There are some with Rose colour'd, and others with white Growing in Spikes on the tops of the Stalks, and are compos'd of five some dark Crimson Stripes on them. The Style 3, are short and are 6, Chives 4, which are white at the bottom, but become purple near t which are flat, of a dark brown, with a Yellow Farina. The Seed V parts, Green in the White, and of a Liver Colour in the Red, set with When ripe 7, The seeds are of a shining Black. The Almond in it is thin Skin that Covers it. N.B. The Chives 4, are set with Shining Cri 5 Part of the Seed Vessel open'd. 9. a Summit Magnified.

VIRTUES.

These Roots are Cordial and Cephalic.

T. Sheldrake delin.

TIMOTHY SHELDRAKE Botanicum Medicinale (An Herbal of Medicinial Plants) LONDON, 1759 CHICAGO BOTANIC GARDEN